

SUBJECT-VERB AGREEMENT WORKSHEET #6

EXERCISE

Circle the subjects and underline the correct form of the verb in the following sentences.

1. Everybody but Sam (has, have) read The Chosen at least once.
2. Despite her many interests, Maria is one of those persons who (is, are) always able to complete their work on time.
3. The whereabouts of his chemistry notebook (remains, remain) a mystery.
4. A collection of good quality magazines (makes, make) good reading for a vacation.
5. The History of English (is, are) a fascinating volume containing interesting information about our language.
6. Physics (is, are) a difficult subject for many students.
7. Look! Some of the dwellings of the ancient Indians (is, are) still apparent.
8. Each of the islands in the group (is, are) charming in its own way.
9. There (is, are) a number of Monet paintings that were stolen by art thieves several years ago.
10. (Is, Are) either Hermann Hesse or Virginia Woolf mentioned in that essay on the novel?
11. The long and the short of it (is, are) that he has no money.
12. The media usually (covers, cover) military news rather well.
13. Neither American nor British poetry (is, are) covered well in that class.
14. Leonardo da Vinci is one of those men who (is, are) universally recognized as geniuses.
15. Everyone agrees that measles (is, are) not a fun disease.
16. In today's army the barracks (is, are) certainly not the way he remembers them.
17. Because of the blizzard, not one of the buses (is, are) running today.
18. Isn't it time some of the raspberries (is, are) ready to be picked.
19. The ship's crew (has, have) demanded improved conditions.
20. The poetry of Robert Louis Stevenson and A. A. Milne (is, are) read and enjoyed by children and adults alike.

21. Pork and beans (is, are) a staple in a camper's diet.
22. His own satisfaction together with the strength of the Round Table (was, were) reward alone for King Arthur.
23. Neither you nor I (am, are) fully able to understand the full consequences of his actions.
24. Do you know where everyone (is, are) going for spring break?