Our skin is the largest organ in our bodies. Neat, huh? Therefore, I think that good skin care is crucial. However, skin care can be problematic for many people. Whether you live in a dry climate or a humid climate, you may have to use or avoid skin care products with moisturizers. Moisturizers are a great way of adding much needed tone and moisture to your skin. Your skin is like a sponge. When the sponge goes dry, the sponge hardens and begins to decay. You'll look like a zombie without a good moisturizer. Without a good moisturizer, my skin becomes dry, and dryness can cause irritation. A dry climate can necessitate using moisturizers. However, you must be cautious of moisturizing products with abrasive agents, which can damage your skin. Some moisturizing products which contain microscopic abrasives can seriously damage the skin upon contact. Finally, oily products may not be good in either climate. Who wants to have oily skin? Yuck! Skin care products do not need to be oily or greasy to moisturize the skin.
